

Harry Potter sequel sold for 25000 pounds

Contributed by Sarba Raj Bartaula
Wednesday, 11 June 2008

The previously mentioned Harry Potter sequel has appeared in the charity for auction and has been sold for 25000 pounds.

It was auctioned at the "What's Your Story?" auction at Waterstone's flagship store in central London yesterday, along with 12 other card-sized works. The funds collected will go to English PEN, the writers' association, and the British charity Dyslexia Action. Copies of the cards will be collated into a book to be made available at the bookstore and online in August.